

So, you have raised a concern or complaint. Will anything change?

Your experiences are looked at and used to improve and develop local healthcare and social care services where appropriate.

Information from anonymous patient/carer stories is used in staff training to improve their understanding of patient experience.

The learning is shared with other health and social care communities and contributes to national good practice.

Examples of change: new patient leaflets, customer care training for staff, new support for patient transport, improved services like new booking systems for hospital referrals, new services such as the dental helpline.

Or text us on 07789 741099.

The patient advice and complaints team

Many problems, upsets or concerns can be dealt with locally and quickly by identifying the problem and trying to resolve it. You can speak to any member of health and social care staff straight away, wherever you are, or contact the PALS team.

We can help patients, their families, carers and NHS staff by providing a free, confidential service when you:

- want help to sort out a problem
- have concerns, complaints, questions or suggestions about your local NHS services
- have an issue when a number of different agencies are involved
- need someone to listen to you and be treated with respect and sensitivity
- want to meet someone face to face
- want to raise issues so things improve and 'it doesn't happen to others'

The team want to hear when things are worrying or disappointing, so that services can learn and improve.

If your issue includes your NHS GP, dentist, local pharmacist or optician or some specialist services, we can advise you on options and whether to contact NHS England on 0300 311 22 33.

PALS – at your service

If you need a quick solution to provide you with information, an explanation, advice or to help you sort out your problem, we will work with you and the local health/social care and voluntary sector staff and managers to do this.

We will:

- agree with you what actions you wish us to take and how we keep in touch
- make sure that your experiences, good or bad, are used to develop and improve local healthcare and, where appropriate, social care services
- continue to provide support when the issue/concern is ongoing and complicated
- attend meetings with you and healthcare professionals to provide support
- support patient/carer, public and voluntary sector involvement in planning and developing local services
- get involved in local patient/carer support groups to hear first hand what is happening locally and to raise awareness of the help we provide

IMPORTANT Raising a concern or a complaint will not negatively affect your healthcare in any way. All issues are taken seriously.

If your concern cannot be resolved informally to your satisfaction, you may wish to consider making a formal complaint

What happens? We will:

- contact you to discuss the options and agree how your complaint will be looked at, including advice on contacting the Independent Health Complaints Advocacy Service
- send a written acknowledgement letter confirming issues, timescales and what results are wanted
- ask for written consent if we need to access your health records to respond to your complaint or work with a third party
- where appropriate, obtain an independent clinical opinion on the care you have received
- provide a response detailing what we found out and any actions taken to prevent the same thing happening to someone else
- if you wish, offer a meeting to discuss the response and explain our findings

If you are not happy with our response, you have the right to refer the matter to the Parliamentary and Health Service Ombudsman.
